The group is comprised of senior congressional aides – who help with drafting and editing legislation and enforcing the rules – that has been called ‘shadow legislative staff’ because the positions do not require Senate confirmation. The post, which is now down, included everything from senior staff members lobbying for the Islamic State and calls for ‘al-Qaeda on the Arabian Peninsula’ to be banned, to documents revealing the hypocrisy behind the Obama administration’s claims about its drone program. The ‘shadow staff’ have a history of posting sensitive documents to a private website before they reach Congress, and at least one person was suspended in the past after trying to secretly send a link to what was then called ‘WikiLeaks’. The link to the documents is now on a private email list but the source who sent it also boasted that it was intended to embarrass and discredit the administration and was to be a “trial run” in preparation for the release of the anti-drone bill (which is currently under consideration by Congress). “What I’m hoping is that my post raises the profile of [this] particular issue”, the anonymous source told the New York Post. One of the documents on the post, which now appears to be deleted, was an email chain between two ‘shadow staff’ members discussing the issue and coming up with ways to expose the hypocrisy and incompetence of the Department of Defense and the Obama administration. It says that the “[Obama] administration’s attempt to provide a cover for the CIA
